Quality Communities create Quality of Life

This workshop will feature several topics during the day-long event, including citizen engagement, creating/preserving districts, how to create public spaces, how Oklahoma cities and towns are using 1 cent sales tax to fund capital improvement plans, and, the Keep OK Beautiful “Paint for Projects.”

Presenter Monica Carden, City of Del City, will speak on how Del City has fought blight through a home inspection program. Shane Hampton, with the OU Institute for Quality Communities, will discuss placemaking – a process of creating quality public spaces based on local assets, culture, and preferences; Midwest City’s Christine Brakefield will present ideas regarding how to develop and preserve districts and public spaces. Daniel McClure, Director of Research at OML, will lead a session that is focused on best practices for community building and engagement, as well as ideas for developing and preparing municipally minded leaders.
